

G. L. Thompson: Germania. The Capital of the New World

314 pages

Germany won the Second World War and the Great German Empire came into existence which reached the Ural. The story is set in the 1950s. The German citizens are proudly watching the building operations demonstrating the power of the Empire. They are enjoying the life of the winner and do not know anything about reality. They are unaware of the horror of the past, of killing the Jews, or the fights for power within the Empire. Siegfried Wolff, a former commando has a dangerous task: everybody needs to be liquidated who threatens the Empire. And it has to happen in secret. At whatever cost...

The author, with his fictional novel based on historical documents and written in fascinating style, invites us to be part of the game: what would have happened, if...