

Lea Polgár: The Master of Damascus

168 pages

After fifty years of wandering, the world-famous violinist returns home to Hungary with his heritage, a wonderful Klezmer violin. But the violin sounds only for a player it chooses as a master. It has been mute since the Second World War, but Zigenheim Junior has kept his special heritage for more decades because it is his mission to pass the violin on to someone who is appropriate for it. He finds this person in Budapest: a Jewish girl, Beka Ritter, who mourns for his recently died father.
